How to Protect Personal & Bank Information

There are many scams and frauds that occur. If you encounter anything suspicious, then do not provide your information.

Scams to watch out for include:

 Emails: Never reveal personal or financial information in an email. Do not respond to email solicitations for information.

 Debit & Credit Cards: Never provide account numbers to anyone you don't know.

 Phone Calls: Be suspicious of unsolicited phone calls with A.I. voices posing as family members, asking for your banking information.

 Bitcoin & Gift Cards: Contact the credit union before sending money to anyone asking for payments via unconventional methods like Bitcoin, Venmo and PayPal.

 Fake Jobs: If you are hired and are sent a check for you to deposit and send money back, wait until the check is cleared before sending any funds. Scammers will often try providing a fake check that will bounce.

 Third Party Money Processors: There are many third-party processors that make it easy to send money to people. If a company asks you to send money by using one of these processors, make sure they are who they claim to be. Many times, a fraudster will pretend to be a utility company to fraudulently take your money.
